

“For piece to reign on Earth, humans must evolve into new beings who have learned to see the whole first”

During its existence mankind accomplished a lot of things. It was a great achievement to light the first fire and so was stepping on the moon.

The thing that connects pre-historic man and today's is the will and need to evolve.

The type of evolution I am talking about is not only physical but mental and even spiritual by nature.

Evolution of civilization

If we know a little about history, and we possess a little knowledge about ancient civilizations we can notice a certain pattern in the rise and destruction of those nations.

Thing that connects Egypt and Greece for example is the fact that during their greatest epochs they had certain conditions met.

These conditions are various but one stands out as the most important. In my opinion it's the “Free flow of ideas”.

I will now give an example about what happens when the free flow of ideas stop.

Egypt and its culture for example remained same for hundreds of years. Rules and traditions first pharaohs set, remained unchanged for a quite a long time. These amenities and beliefs were quite advanced for the time but after those first pharaohs they slowly became obsolete. They became this way because they turned into dogmas, and at one point in time it became almost impossible to contradict them.

Here I would like to give an example of pharaoh Akhenaten who tried to change these dogmas but his actions only caused an uproar amongst the priest and common people.

We can say that these negative dogmas in a way stopped Egypt's development in many ways and eventually led to its destruction.

Meaning of this part it to emphasize this important aspect in human cultural evolution, when the flow stops we have periods without noticeable advancement (dark ages) and when it “flows” we have periods like the Renaissance etc.

Civilization Today

We are now in 21. Century and we can say that in many respects our civilization evolved. But can we claim that we evolved as humans?

Are we any different from those people in Egypt or Greece?

In my opinion our own development did not follow our technological development and in many respects we are the same as we were 5000 years ago.

We still wage wars but instead of swords and spears we use guns and rockets. Only tools changed while the war as a phenomenon remained unchanged.

If we look at the world today we can easily conclude that there is a lot of hatred between countries and nationalities.

People despise other people for various reasons, color of the skin and religion are only some of them.

Homophobia and animosity secretly plagues today's society even if it is “officially democratic and tolerant”.

The path whole humanity walks right now is leading to its destruction. Global warming and general pollution are only some of the consequences of man's ignorance.

Evolution of man

And now we come to the essence of this essay which is as I noted in the beginning, "Evolution".

In order to enter a new age of enlightenment and reason, mankind must evolve past today's boundaries.

New awareness of one self and others must be achieved. With this awareness all wars would stop and piece would rein the earth.

In this sense we must perceive the whole picture and become new and more perfect beings.

If we by any chance, fail to achieve this; then only doom awaits.....
